LEADER, LEAD THYSELF: HOW TO FOCUS ON SELF TO BETTER LEAD OTHERS

The greatest leaders often start with little to show but a vision and a dream. Inspiring people to embrace their goals, join their ranks, and work alongside them is imperative for leaders. However, before someone can inspire others, they must first look inward to lead themselves. The practice of self-leadership has been a key component to every successful leader for generations. The term was coined by Professor Charles C. Manz, defining self-leadership as a “comprehensive self-influence perspective that concerns leading oneself toward performance of naturally motivating tasks, as well as managing oneself to do work that must be done but is not naturally motivating.”

While there are many different types of leadership, the practice of self-leadership may be the most important style to not only build up oneself but also to inspire others to be the best versions of themselves.

Training Employees to Fill Needed Skills During a Hiring Crunch

In the past couple years, there has been a paradigm shift in the job market. Positions that were once easy to hire for now seem impossible to fill. And while there isn't the type of skills gap we've seen in the past, the new skills gap is simply not being able to hire talent with necessary skills due to the hiring crunch.
